

Creative Practice for Renewal and Authentic Leadership

for Non-Profit Organizations

October 21 & 22, 2011

An infusion of creativity will revitalize and renew the non-profit workplace and transform organizational dynamics. When we are tapping our innate creativity, we are in essence “more alive,” affecting every aspect of our organization. Creative Ground’s team has broken creativity down into several habits of mind that we can learn, practice and become fluent in. From this weekend you will come away with a renewed sense of purpose and resilience, an expanded set of creative problem-solving tools and a deeper, more embedded experience of your authentic self and leadership.

Whidbey Island ..... 10am-5pm Friday & 9am-5pm Saturday

<http://www.creativegroundhq.com/offerings/team-renewal/>

$345 includes two-day workshop, lunch and dinner on Friday, plus lunch on Saturday, both on-site.

$395 includes the workshop, meals (left) and shared accommodation at the Whidbey Institute Friday night. Limited spaces available.

$100 non-refundable deposit required by September 15, 2011
15% discount if paid in full by August 31, 2011

Lisa Fitzhugh

Lisa has spent the last 20 years accessing and building a strong practice of creativity in all aspects of work and life. Lisa is the founder and former executive director of Arts Corps, a nationally recognized arts education program.

Sarah Maclean Bicknell

Sarah is an international teacher and speaker on evolutionary and creative change for the individual and the workplace. She has been teaching and mentoring for 40 years after extensive study with Native American teachers.

Lauren Atkinson

Lauren’s creative practice has evolved and developed over a 20-year period as a collaborative visual artist and teaching artist working with people of all ages and backgrounds. Lauren is a founding member and master teaching artist with Arts Corps.

For more information contact: info@creativegroundhq.com, 509.594.0167